

HOW I CAME TO WORK AT STORIES FOR MY LITTLE SISTER

Hello again,

Here I am, back again at www.storiesformylittlesister.com with my second blog post.

I thought I would use this post to tell you about how I happened to meet Samantha and Diana. Well, it is quite a funny story really.

It was a bright sunny day and Samantha and Diana were out walking in the park. I was out in the park because the park is one of my favourite places.

I was happily running in the long grass (because running in the long grass is my favourite thing to do in the park) when Diana nearly tripped over me. Luckily, Samantha saw me and said to her, "Watch out for that little gerbill!"

Well, I would have been rather upset about nearly being tripped over had it not been for my outrage at having been mistaken for a GERBIL. For anyone who has not read my first blog post, I am a HAMSTER.

I immediately said to Samantha, "Who are you calling a gerbil? No offence to gerbils, but I am a hamster! That's right a HAMSTER... and by the way, you people should look where you are going!"

Samantha said, "You certainly are opinionated, aren't you?"

at Stories for My Little Sister
www.storiesformylittlesister.com
Free Online Books for 21st Century Kids

I replied, "Yes, I have an opinion on just about everything. For example, it is my opinion that it is very easy to tell that I am a hamster and not a gerbil."

Samantha said, "Would you be interested in a job? Diana and I have been looking for someone to write a fun and interesting blog on our website, www.storiesformylittlesister.com."

The rest is history, as they say, and here I am, Harrison Hamster I, blogger!

The moral of this blog post is that sometimes you just stumble upon an opportunity. Other times, an opportunity stumbles upon you.

I do hope you've enjoyed hearing about how I got my job, and that you'll come back soon to read my next post.

Bye for now!

Harrison Hamster I
7th August 2011